

---

Acknowledgments

Edward Miles wishes to thank the Hewlett Foundation for grants in 1990 and 1991 that enabled him to build a team in Seattle at the University of Washington to begin this research project. He also wishes to thank then dean G. Ross Heath for critical support provided during a sabbatical year in 1993 to 1994 and the University of Washington for the award of the Virginia and Prentice Bloedel Chair of Marine Studies and Public Affairs. Without this support between July 1994 and the summer of 2000 the book could not have been completed.

Thanks are also due to members of the Seattle team, who made significant contributions to the joint work but who left the project before the work was completed. In particular, Kai N. Lee was a vigorous member of the group working on a study of the regime for controlling the international trade in tropical timber until he left the University of Washington in 1992. Similarly, Susan Gaertner worked as Miles's research assistant from 1991 to 1992 on an evaluation of the London Dumping Convention regime but left the university before the study was completed. Maaria Solin Curlier, coauthor of chapter 14, prepared several drafts on the CITES regime as her master's thesis for the School of Marine Affairs at the University of Washington. Because preparation of this book took so long, the press of family and professional commitments prevented her from doing the final revisions. Steinar Andresen graciously consented to complete the work for Maaria.

The Seattle and Oslo teams wish jointly to acknowledge the support of the NATO Collaborative Research Grants Program for grant No. CRG 93073 in 1993 to 1994, which was critical in facilitating meetings of the teams in Seattle and Oslo during a difficult period in the life of this project. We jointly acknowledge also the valuable comments made on an earlier draft by the four anonymous reviewers of MIT Press.

Elaine Carlin wishes to acknowledge the extraordinary hospitality of Willy Østreng, director, and the entire Fridtjof Nansen Institute (FNI) and of Arild Underdal and his good offices during her time in residence in Oslo.

Arild Underdal has benefited from the supportive environments of the University of Oslo Department of Political Science, the Center for International Climate and Environment Research (CICERO), and the Centre for Advanced Study, Oslo. A grant from the Research Council of Norway to CICERO and FNI enabled him to set aside extra time at a critical juncture. He is grateful to Lynn P. Nygaard for editing assistance that not only improved his English but also helped clarify the argument in several instances.

The FNI team wishes to acknowledge support from the Norwegian Research Council that made possible its early work on this project from 1990 to 1992 in close cooperation with Arild Underdal. Additional support from the Research Council was obtained in 1997 through a joint grant to FNI and CICERO to complete the work. Because, for reasons that Miles has explained in the preface to this book, completion was not possible within the time frame of the grant, support for completing the project was then provided by FNI. Since the FNI team would not have been able to finish the project without this support, its members extend their sincere gratitude to FNI.

Finally, all the authors would like to acknowledge a large debt of gratitude to Suanty Kaghan, secretary to Edward Miles in the School of Marine Affairs at the University of Washington. Kaghan bore the brunt of moving the manuscript into final production from the last two drafts and typed all of Miles's chapters in the book through several versions. We also thank Jeannette Waddell for her valuable assistance in preparing the index.