I Editors' Note

Forum: Charting the Future of Food

3 Introduction BY MARC J. COHEN

New technologies are forcing rapid globalization of markets, and the agriculture industry has no choice but to adapt. There is, however, a stark disparity between developed and developing nations: researchers in developed nations are embracing a biotech and GMO revolution, while developing nations are struggling to manage unfavorable intellectual property laws and trade barriers. Biofuel production stretches agricultural resources in the North, famine cripples economies in the South, the Green Revolution saves lives in the East, and the WTO rules against governments in the West. Though policy experts participating in the current round of trade negotiations in Doha are attempting to address the challenges facing farmers, the outcome is unclear. This forum aims to explore the fate of our farms in the 21st century.

5 The Softest Subsidy

Agricultural Subsidy Cuts, New Biotechnologies, Developing Countries, and Cotton
KYM ANDERSON AND ERNESTO VALENZUELA

13 Food, Feed, or Fuel?

Examining Linkages Between Biofuels and Agricultural Market Economies
SIWA MSANGI AND MANDY EWING

21 Agricultural Trade and Climate Change

Can the WTO Promote Resilience in the Face of Uncertainty?
LEE ANN JACKSON

31 The Local Organic Food Paradigm

ALEX A. AVERY AND DENNIST. AVERY

Conflict & Security

47 Averting Catastrophe in the Middle East

SUSAN BRADEN

The current conditions in Iraq can only be remedied by peaceful partitioning of the country into three separate entities.

55 Asian Power: Sino-Russian Conflict in Central Asia?

KATHLEEN J. HANCOCK

Future tensions may arise between Russia and China as former Soviet states in Central Asia compete with Russia to export their natural gas and oil to China.

Culture & Society

- 63 Substance and Vanity at the Palace: Monarchy and Royalty Beyond the Twentieth Century
NEIL BLANE

Royalty supercedes monarchy; the personal and economic importance of royals destroys the significance of any residual constitutional role.

- 71 The Catholic Church: An Underestimated and Necessary Actor in International Affairs
JODOK TROY

As one of the oldest political actors in the international system, the Catholic Church lends its stabilizing capabilities to become once more an “ethical reservoir” and peace-maker in an age of a declared and believed “clash of civilizations.”

Law & Ethics

- 81 Rights for Indigenous Peoples: The Struggle for Uniformity: the UN Declaration and Beyond
JAMES C. HOPKINS

The Colonial Bloc must recognize and adhere to the Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples to ensure a proper legal status for their respective communities.

- 89 Global Mental Health: Changing Norms, Constant Rights
LAWRENCE O. GOSTIN AND LANCE GABLE

The mistreatment of individuals with mental disabilities is a persistent, global issue that must be remedied through direct legal, practical, and economic measures.

Politics & Diplomacy

- 97 Changing the Political Climate on Climate Change
TOM DASCHLE

The United States must act with urgency to lead the international response to the threat of climate change.

- 107 The Sarkozy Effect: France's New Presidential Dynamic[†]
J.G. SHIELDS

President Sarkozy is setting out to undertake much needed reforms in France, but his success will depend on factors both within and beyond his own control.

Business & Economics

- 115 A French Action Figure: Nicolas Sarkozy's First Months as President[†]
ARTHUR GOLDHAMMER

President Nicolas Sarkozy hopes to save the French welfare state with a relatively modest though energetically promoted package of tax, labor-market, and welfare-system reforms.

Science & Technology

- 125 Battling Botnets and Online Mobs: Estonia's Defense Efforts during the Internet War
GADI EVRON

Estonia's experience shown that Internet war is a real security threat that demands increased global attention and government action.

Books

- 133 Turkish Hindsight: Muslim Roots, Secular Minds
IMAD-AD-DEAN AHMAD

A review of The New Turkish Republic: Turkey as a Pivotal State in the Muslim World.

- 141 Africa and Anger: Algeria Remembers
JAMES JAY CARAFANO

A review of Algeria: Anger of the Dispossessed.

View from the Ground

- 149 Invisible, Insecure, and Inaccessible: The Humanitarian Crisis in Chad
STEPHANIE GETSON

The crisis in Darfur cannot be solved until the international community recognizes the crisis in its neighbor, Chad.

- 153 Perception and the Costs of Waiting: Transition in Cuba
JOHN-MICHAEL MCCOLL

The United States must embrace an active approach to restore its relationship with Cuba ultimately to extend democracy and free markets to the Cuban population.

A Look Back

- 163 Rethinking Victory in the "War on Terror"
INTERVIEW WITH PHILIP H. GORDON

The United States cannot win the war on terror through conventional military means, but by upholding its own values until the ideology of terrorism crumbles from within.

†Special Multi-Section Feature

POLITICS & DIPLOMACY AND BUSINESS & ECONOMICS
