

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Philip Alston is the John Norton Pomeroy Professor of Law, New York University School of Law. From 2004 to 2010 the author was United Nations Special Rapporteur on Extrajudicial, Summary or Arbitrary Executions, and in that capacity reported regularly to both the U.N. Human Rights Council and the U.N. General Assembly.

Ron Barrett is a professor of Anthropology at Macalester College and teaches courses in medical anthropology, cultural anthropology, emerging infections, and the anthropology of death and dying. He has conducted fieldwork in Northern and Western India as well as in the United States. His book, Aghor Medicine: Pollution, Death, and Healing in Northern India (2008), was awarded the Wellcome Medal for medical anthropology by the Royal Anthropological Institute.

Rebecca J. Cook, J.D., J.S.D, holds the Faculty Chair in International Human Rights, Faculty of Law, University of Toronto, where she is Co-Director of the International Program on Reproductive and Sexual Health Law. She is co-author, with Dickens and Fathalla, of Reproductive Health and Human Rights (2003, also available in Chinese, French, Portuguese and Spanish), and with Cusack of Stereotyping Women: Transnational Legal Perspectives (2010, also in Spanish). She is editor of Human Rights of Women: National and International Perspectives (1994, available in Chinese and Spanish), and co-editor with Charles Ngwena of Health and Human Rights, International Library of Medicine, Ethics and Law series (2007).

Caitlin Hannahan '11 is graduating with a Political Science major. She is originally from Amherst, Massachusetts. Caitlin participated in the yearlong Macalester/Maastricht Comparative Globalization program, dividing her time between Uruguay and the Netherlands. Her research concerned the effect of migration on national identity. Next year, she will begin a Masters program in International Affairs at the University of Geneva IHEID.

Paul Schadewald is the Associate Director of the Civic Engagement Center in the Institute for Global Citizenship at Macalester College. He has worked on campus and community projects with Imagining America, the Bonner Foundation, the Lilly Project for Work, Ethics, and Vocation, and the Minnesota Historical Society. In 2007, Minnesota

Campus Compact presented him with the Sister Pat Kowalski Award for Exemplary Leadership and Contributions to Civic Engagement. He earned a Ph.D. in U.S. History at Indiana. His areas of research include urban history, public history, and religious studies.

Proma Sen '11 grew up in India and the United Arab Emirates. During her junior year, she participated in the Macalester/Maastricht study abroad program. She graduated from Macalester with majors in International Studies and Economics, and a minor in French.

James von Geldern is a professor of Russian and International Studies at Macalester College, author of several books on Soviet cultural history, and a human rights lawyer specializing in asylum law.