

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The Institute for Global Citizenship would like to thank all of the people who made this volume possible. We appreciate the careful work of Macalester's Communications and Publications unit, with particular kudos to Kim David for her accuracy and patience. David Reynolds of Media Services is indispensable and always at the top of our list to thank. Bon Appétit and Facilities Services were solicitous and conscientious as always. Finally, we are very grateful to our student assistants, who helped coordinate the logistics of the Roundtable and proofread this journal. We especially acknowledge Barbara Walkowiak for her assiduous editing skills.

The Macalester International Roundtable, an intellectual festival convened each October, is an occasion for serious conversations across the College on topics of transnational significance. The practice is to commission a set of essays—a keynote address, followed by two additional major essays delivered by seasoned scholars—which become the center of dialogue and discussions. Each of the two essays receives a public response from a Macalester senior and a member of the faculty. The purposes of the Roundtable are to cogitate together upon crucial but difficult global questions and to cultivate further the equipoise that minds of the Macalester academic community have long been expected to hold between local anxieties and transnational pressures.