

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

DANIEL ADOLF obtained a Masters in International Studies from the University of Sydney in 2005. He also holds a Bachelors Degree in Communication Studies from the University of the Arts in London. His areas of expertise are: Terrorism, Asian-Pacific Politics and Theories of International Relations. He currently works for Weber Shandwick in Berlin, a public affairs consultancy. From February to July 2006, he worked for The League of Human Rights (Liga lidských práv) in Prague, where he assisted in the organisation of an international conference on Corporate Social Responsibility.

IAN KLINKE holds a BA in European Studies from the University of Maastricht. He is currently undertaking an MA in Politics, Security and Integration at the School of Slavonic and East European Studies in University College London.

ZDENĚK MATĚJKA has been a professional diplomat all his life. Since 2002 he has been lecturing at the Jan Masaryk Centre of International Studies, the Faculty of International Relations at the University of Economics in Prague, and at the University of International and Public Relations, also in Prague. His main study interests are: International organisations, European integration, and Czech and American foreign policy.

ANDREAS MAURER, Dr. rer. soc., is the head of the Research Unit on EU Integration at the SWP (German Institute for International and Security Affairs) in Berlin. His areas of expertise cover Governance in the European Union, Parliaments and Multi-Level Parliamentarism within the EU, negotiations and reform of European treaties and European cooperation in justice and home affairs. He currently focuses on issues related to the EU Treaty and regarding a Constitution for Europe, EU Soft Law (Institutions' Rules of Procedure and Interinstitutional Agreements), Perspectives, roles and functions of the European Parliament and of the national parliaments in EU integration, the Reform of the Council European Union and related reforms in national political systems.

BESSMA MOMANI is an Assistant Professor at the University of Waterloo. In addition to a monograph entitled IMF-Egyptian Negotiations, she has published articles about the IMF in Review of International Political Economy, Asian Affairs, Global Society, Journal of International Relations and Development, New Political Economy, Canadian Journal of Political Science, and Review of International Organizations.

KATALIN SÁRVÁRY received her PhD from the Central European University in Budapest in December 2004. Her thesis examined Classical and Constructivist theories of diplomacy, and provided the groundwork for her critique of Alexander Wendt's theory of IR in the Journal of International Relations and Development (JIRD), and in Routledge (2006). The 2006 parliamentary elections in Hungary acted as a catalyst for her most recent analysis on Hungarian foreign policy.

LUCIE TUNKROVÁ, was born in 1977, graduated from Miami University in Ohio, USA, with a degree in international relations and Palacky University in Olomouc with a degree in politics and European studies. She also studied at the University of Limerick in Ireland, and worked as an intern for the European Commission (Directorate-General for Agriculture, unit enlargement). Currently she is a lecturer for both the Department of Politics and European Studies at the Palacky University and the Fatih University in Istanbul. Her field of specialisation is European integration with a specialisation in enlargement and theories regarding the EU's decision making processes. Her other two areas of interest are Nordic political systems and Turkish foreign policy.

PETR URBÁNEK, was born 1986 in Czechoslovakia, and has lived in Kuwait and Greece for most of his life. He has attended three high schools, each in a different country, finally finishing his International Baccalaureate at the English College of Prague. Currently he is a second year student at the London School of Economics where he studies for his BSc in International Relations. He has a wide range of academic interests with a particular focus on transatlantic relations between the US and Europe, and is also interested in Chinese foreign policy.

JEVGENIA VIKTOROVA is a PhD student from the School of International Relations at the University of St Andrews in Scotland and a visiting lecturer at the Estonian School of Diplomacy and Tallinn University in Estonia. She has published on theoretical and empirical issues in border studies, as well as on security and regionalism in Northern and Eastern Europe. Her current research focuses on cultural aspects of violent conflict and peace building. The author can be contacted at the following address: jv2@st-and.ac.uk.